Borrowed Glory on This Church Rev. Charles A. Curran (1913-1978)

by Donald M. Schlegel

(Concluded, from Vol. XXXVIII, No. 11)

Loyola Professor

On Father Curran's return from Europe, Bishop Ready gave him permission to accept the position at Loyola and wrote to Samuel Cardinal Stritch in Chicago, to be sure that Father Curran's residence would be in a parish or a religious institution, and that he would have an orderly priestly life in Chicago.¹⁵ Father Curran wrote a letter to Bishop Ready from Zaleski, thanking him for this permission. In part he wrote, "On the other hand, since your Excellency concurs in the validity of the reasons for my going to Loyola both to teach...and to prepare a research and graduate program in religious counselling..." In the file copy of this letter, Bishop Ready underlined the word "concurr" and noted in the margin, "under duress & harassment!"¹⁶ Father Curran officially took up the position of Professor of Psychology in the graduate school at Loyola University in Chicago on September 1, 1955. He was named Professor of Human Relations in 1973.

As an academic, in addition to a normal teaching routine and the expected writing, he served in many short-term capacities through the years, such as a member of advisory councils, a member of editorial boards, visiting professor, keynote speaker, and research professor. In 1970 he founded the Counseling-Learning Institutes. In 1972 and 1973 at the request of John Cardinal Dearden of Detroit, Father Curran and staff conducted Counseling-Learning Institutes throughout Michigan. He wrote eight books (not counting translations into Spanish, French, Portuguese, and Polish), the most popular being the second, Counseling in Catholic Life and Education (1952). In addition there was a sixteen-volume series called The Word Becomes Flesh, A Psychodynamic Approach to Homiletics and Catechetics and Meditation (1973 to 1976), consisting for the most part of four homilies for each Sunday of the liturgical year. He contributed chapters to another twelve books and wrote eighty articles for professional journals of psychology and psychiatry.

The same Sister who had commented on the squabble in Manitowoc noted that, in retrospect, it was remarkable that Bishop Mussio of Steubenville and Fathers Maloney and Curran "were able to anticipate in the '40s so many of the changes which were later mandated after Vatican Council II by the Sacred Congregation of Religious and Secular Institutes, the Vatican agency which governs these institutes worldwide. She says: 'These changes were essential in order to make religious life more healthy for its members and in order to be more effective in meeting the changing needs of the people whom the sisters served. These changes necessitated the complete rewriting of the (Vatican's) Constitutions for Religious Congregations. The change in garb was an external sign of deeper changes in living out the religious life.'"¹⁷

In fact, this 1940s anticipation of the post-Council changes may not have been so remarkable, for Father Curran was able, to at least a small extent, to influence the course of events. In October, 1962, he was appointed a peritus for the Vatican Council. From 1963 to 1966 he served at the Council and was a member of the Preparatory Commission. He did not intend to attend the whole of the third session in 1964 but contributed material to Archbishops Coady and Hurley of the Seminary and Priest Commission.¹⁸ At the end of the Council, the Holy Father gave the bishops and others who had made notable contributions a special commemorative medal. Father Godfrey Poage, Director of the Vatican Office of Vocations, thought that Father Curran's contribution in vocation work merited the same honor and presented him with one of the medals.¹⁹

Early in 1963 Father Curran completed a draft of an article on the Council for the Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion. He sent this to Bishop Issenmann, asking him to review it. Bishop Issenmann praised Father's work in general, saying that "Counseling is a wonderfully consoling work, when one sees the positive help given through guidance." He was bothered, however, by some theologically inexact wording from which the reader could infer a reference to pantheism. "We do not participate in the Person of God and we are not in Ultimate Being," he wrote in his reply. Interestingly, this article does not appear in the bibliography of Father Curran's works, prepared by himself. But it was published in the April issue of the journal, with the title "Some Psychological Aspects of Vatican Council II." It explores parallels between the results of counselling of individuals as family members and the potential impacts of the Council relative to Protestant communities. The remarks that Bishop Issenmann had objected to had been removed or rewritten.

Curran later taught his specialty at Mundelein Seminary in Chicago, where he influenced many hundreds of would-be priests.²⁰

Father Curran's Books

1945 - Personality Factors in Counseling

This was said to be a book of wide philosophical and social implications, revealing the fundamental integrity, responsibility, and dignity of human nature.

1952 - Counseling in Catholic Life and Education

Designed for those engaged in the work of counseling, this book gives excerpts from actual interviews and offers many practical suggestions for the improvement of counseling. It emphasizes methods of fostering in each individual the development of the virtues of counsel and prudence. It was dedicated to Bishop Ready, who also wrote a preface, as did Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, Dean of the College of Cardinals and Secretary of the Congregation for the Oriental Church.

1968 - Counseling and Psychotherapy: The Pursuit of Values

Concerns goals, purposes, intents, and motivations that fill the gap between counseling therapy (attainment of self-knowledge) and behavior modification.

1969 - Religious Values in Counseling and Psychotherapy

Addresses values in the "person-centered age" which is also an era of large organizations such as church, state, and business. Discusses in depth the question of sin, guilt, and anxiety and confronts the relations of God and man not as theoretical theological or psychological phenomena but as they are experienced.

1971 - Psychological Dynamics in Religious Living

Suggests that the solution to the problem of religious institutions getting in the way of religion itself is to re-personalize institutional structures, so that they serve the individual rather than an abstraction. Contends that every person expresses his uniqueness by his creativity and that only where there is creative listening, understanding, and responding can people work together for a common cause.

1972 - Counseling-Learning, A Whole-Person Model for Education

Father Curran not only developed a theory of total student involvement in the educational process, but worked out specific applications of the theory. This was based on his belief that any effective instruction must be ‘therapeutic’ by being formative of a more completely harmonious personality. The method employs as many of the learner’s faculties as possible.

1976 - Counseling-Learning in Second Languages

Extends the counseling-learning approach to the learning of second languages. Activities are carefully structured both to engage the learner as a total person and to create a genuinely personal experience. The community aspect is to produce an intense atmosphere of warmth and belonging, creating security and support for the learner of a second language. This approach is still in use and seems to be increasing in popularity in the age of the internet.

1978 - Understanding: a Necessary Ingredient in Human Belonging

Offers a thorough discussion of Father Curran’s vision of the meaning of “understanding”— understanding the clients’ or learners’ world by entering into their world, to see them as they see themselves. A review noted that Father Curran’s methods differed in their cognitive emphasis from Carl Rogers’ client-centered model, seeking an understanding between counselor and client...permitting the client-learner to move out of the often uncomfortable world of affectivity into the more comfortable and understandable world of cognition.

In 1982 Father Curran’s colleague Rev. Daniel D. Tranel published The Cognitive Client: A Counseling-Learning Model and Father Curran was credited with co-authorship.

Life’s End

As his health failed, at the relatively early age of 64, Bishop Edward Herrmann and Msgr. Bennett Applegate paid a visit to Father Curran in Chicago. He still was a priest of the Diocese of Columbus and the Bishop wanted to be at his side, even if for only a short time. The visit made Curran feel that his life and work were more meaningful.

Father Curran died of cancer on July 25, 1978, in East Dubuque, Illinois. His funeral was at St. Augustine Church in Columbus, where the homilist was Father Daniel Tranel, a colleague and co-founder with Father Curran of the Counseling-Learning Institutes, and where a large number of his fellow-diocesan priests expressed their pride in his ministry and asked for him God’s reward of eternal peace. Burial was at St. Joseph Cemetery.

Father Curran’s life work formed a bridge from the neo-Thomistic synthesis attempted earlier in the century, across the misguided techniques of Rogers, to the quite different currents of psychological study of his own time. He contributed significantly to the Church’s appropriation of counseling techniques and psychological methods, demonstrating to several generations of graduate students (clerical, religious, and lay) how psychology’s insights, methods, and strategies were appropriate not only in the therapist’s office, but also in the classroom and even in the pulpit.²¹ During Father Francis Brown’s five years in Chicago, numerous middle-aged priests related to him what an important role Curran had played in their formation. And at the time of his death it was remarked that Curran’s insights into the human personality continued to influence the important literature of the time. Clearly, his had been a concerted effort, within his field of expertise, to “bring every thought into captivity to make it obedient to Christ.” (2 Cor 10:5)

Chronicle of Events in the Diocese of Columbus for 2012

(Compiled by the Editor)

Universal Church

Oct. 7-28. The Thirteenth Ordinary General Assembly of the Synod of Bishops was held, on the topic of “The New Evangelization for the Transmission of the Christian Faith.”

Oct. 11. Pope Benedict XVI formally opened the Year of Faith, “to revive in the whole Church that positive tension—that yearning to announce Christ again to contemporary man.” Not coincidentally, it began on the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of Vatican Council II, which had the same purpose.

Church in the U.S.

Week of January 15. The Federal Department of Health and Human Services announced a ruling that would require Catholic employers to provide health insurance coverage for birth control, sterilization services and “morning after” abortifacients. A narrow conscience exception would not cover employers and ministries, such as schools and charities, that employ or provide services to people of other faiths. Archbishop Gregory Aymond called it “an unprecedented attack on our religious liberty, which is a founding principle of our nation.” A large number of dioceses, including Columbus, and Catholic institutions filed lawsuits to block its implementation and the USCCB determined to oppose it.

Oct. 21. Kateri Tekakwitha and Marianne Cope were among seven saints canonized by Pope Benedict XVI.

Agencies and Institutions

Apr. 15 Broadcast of the diocese’s Sunday Mass began on WHIZ, Zanesville.

June 3 Bishop Campbell blessed the former convent at St. James the Less Church, Columbus, to serve as a friary for Franciscan Brothers Minor from Fort Wayne; they practice their communal life while ministering to the poor and other members of the parish, while others of their community study at the Josephinum.

Parishes

Jan. 28. Bishop Campbell blessed the renovations of St. John the Evangelist Church, Columbus.

Jan. 29 The renovated organ at St. Leo Church was dedicated and a concert was held.

Mar. 18 The mission church of the Sacred Heart in Milford Center was razed.

Apr. 25 Burglars broke into the sacristy of St. Aloysius Church in Columbus and damaged it while stealing chalices and other sacred vessels. Most of the items, though damaged, were turned over to police by a scrap dealer two days later.

June 2 Rev. David Sizemore, Pastor, blessed the new Faith and Family Center at St. John Neumann Parish, Sunbury, containing classrooms, meeting space, kitchen, etc.

Sept. 23 An organ newly installed at Holy Cross Church in Columbus was dedicated.

Personnel and Vocations

May 4 Diocesan seminarians Michael C. Gentry and Matthew B. Morris were ordained to the diaconate in St. Joseph Cathedral by Bishop Campbell.

May 26 Michael Joseph Hinterschied was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Campbell in St. Joseph Cathedral.

July 10 Retired: Rev. Homer D. Blubaugh, Priest Moderator of St. Aloysius and St. Agnes parishes, Columbus; Rev. Michael F. Nimocks, Pastor of St. Mary Mother of God Parish, Marion; and Rev. F. Richard Snoke, Pastor of St. Luke Parish, Danville.

Sept. 1 Retired: Deacon Thomas Barford of St. Paul Parish, Westerville

Nov. 24 Bishop Campbell ordained twelve perma-ment deacons at St. Joseph Cathedral: Deacons Terrence Acox, John Barbour, Timothy Birie, Jeffrey Carpenter, Joseph Ciaciura, Reed Hauser, Joseph Knapke, John Malone Jr., Joseph Meyer, Christopher Reis, Douglas Saunders, and Todd Tucky.
