How Bishop Moeller Wiped out the “Nightmare” Debt of the Diocese—or Did He?

by Donald M. Schlegel

(Part 2 of 3)

Major Sources of Loans

There were many persons who deposited money with Bishop Rosecrans and then Bishop Watterson, on the basis of notes signed by the bishops, for amounts up to $6,000 or more. But larger sources of funds were needed. Bishop Rosecrans borrowed $10,000 on June 26, 1876 and $30,000 on Sep. 19, 1877 from the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company of Milwaukee.²⁹ On his arrival, Bishop Watterson immediately borrowed money. On July 1, 1880 he borrowed $40,000 at 8% from the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. in Milwaukee; and on Oct. 1, 1880 $10,000 from U.S. Mortgage Company.³⁰

The total debt to Northwest Mutual was paid off on Feb. 2, 1886 by agreement with Chandler & Co.³¹

On Jan. 4, 1886 through Chandler & Co., Mortgage Bankers, of Chicago, Bishop Watterson borrowed $100,000, backed by a mortgage, from Mrs. Hetty R. Green.^A The largest property mortgaged apparently was St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum.³² He used this to pay off the $40,000 loan from NW Mutual, mortgages worth $25,000, and other debts. To this loan Mrs. Green added $25,000 later that month. She also allowed the interest to accumulate unpaid, amounting to $75,008 by the end of 1895 and another $19,800 by the end of 1898. The total of over $223,000 was paid off on

Most Rev. Henry Moeller, Bishop of Columbus

May 20, 1899.³³

On April 15, 1899, just two days before his death, Bishop Watterson obtained a new loan from Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia for $115,000 for five years at 4.8%. It was backed by a mortgage on St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum and the Cathedral.³⁴

Bishop Moeller's Plan

Bishop Moeller, with his methodical German mind, immediately set to work to understand his new diocese. Among other pressing needs, he worked on the debt issue, sorted out the status of incardination of several priests, obtained seminarians ready for ordination from eastern schools, and defined the boundaries of the parishes in Franklin County. One of his first acts was to seek the assistance of consultors. In a letter of about Sept. 1, 1900, he asked Fathers D. J. Kennedy, O.P., M. M. Meara, N. E. Pilger, T. J. O'Reilly, and D. A. Clarke to be consultors. Apparently not all of them agreed, for as of Dec. 19, 1900 consultors named in a letter to Pope Leo XIII were Revs. Daniel Kennedy, O.P., Nicholas Pilger, Michael M. Meara, Dennis A. Clarke, James J. Hartley, and Francis S. Howard.³⁵ In working on the issue of the debt, Bishop Moeller also consulted with other clergy, notably Fathers L. W. Mulhane, F. M. Woesman, and Philip Steyle.

Rev. M. M. A. Hartnedy in 1885 proposed a debt reduction plan very close to Bishop Moeller's. (Courtesy of the Archives, Diocese of Steubenville)

The plan for liquidation of the debt, as described in a circular of September 29, 1900, had been reported by a committee of the consultors two days earlier. The diocese, that is, the parishes, excluding the Cathedral parish, was to pay $100,000; the Cathedral congregation was to pay the balance, as might be reduced by 'the available assets of the Diocese.' The letter solicited opinions of the clergy. The committee was to meet again on Oct. 11. Daniel McAlister gave Father M. M. Meara credit for the plan adopted by Bishop Moeller, namely that the debt be split roughly in half between the diocese and the Cathedral Parish. Diocesan assets that were considered potentially available to be used towards the Cathedral Parish share were the former seminary and old cemetery properties in Columbus, which were expected to bring $30,000.³⁶

A few questioned Bishop Moeller's authority to assess the parishes for the debt on the Cathedral. To these he replied that the Archdiocese of Cincinnati, the Archdiocese of New York, and the Diocese of Newark all in recent times had obliged their parishes to contribute towards the building of their cathedrals. He consulted Most Rev. Sebastian Martinelli, the Apostolic Delegate to the U.S., and some eminent canonists and all answered him that he had the right to assess the diocese for the cathedral, the church of the diocese. "Were it not for the fact that it is the Cathedral Church, such an expensive building would never have been built. A church costing $50,000.00 would have been ample for the needs of the people. All the cost over and above that amount was incurred because it was the Cathedral of the Diocese and to require the people worshipping in it to pay for the expenses incurred not on their account but on account of the Diocese is not reasonable. De Angelis Vol. II p. II p. 370 states how the obligation of paying for the Cathedral effects the Bishop, Clergy and People."³⁷

Religious Communities' Pledges

Bishop Moeller sent a letter to the superior of each religious community working in the diocese, asking them to pledge what they could toward reducing the debt. According to a letter from Bishop Moeller to the clergy dated Nov. 20, 1900, $1,000 each had been pledged each by the Dominican Fathers, the Sisters of St. Dominic, the Sisters of Notre Dame, the Sisters of the Poor of St. Francis, the Sisters of St. Francis at St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, and the Sisters of St. Francis at St. Aloysius Academy in New Lexington. Later pledges included $75 from the Capuchin Fathers, $100 from the Sisters of St. Joseph at Holy Family in Columbus, and $500 from the Sisters of the Holy Cross, $500 from the Sisters of St. Francis at St. Mary Parish in Columbus, $20 from the Sisters of Divine Providence, $10 from the Sisters of Mercy in Delaware, and $500 from the Sisters of Charity of Nazareth. The Columbian of Dec. 8, 1900 noted that $23,400 was donated [or pledged?] by the religious communities.

Priests' Pledges

The priests of the diocese were asked to make personal commitments of $250 each, to be paid over ten years. This request was made in letter dated November 15 and November 20. In the latter Bishop Moeller remarked, "It will no doubt be an inducement for the laity to pay the assessments, if the Clergy make a sacrifice and assume the payment of part of the Debt." He mentioned the amounts the leading clergymen had already pledged: himself $1,000, V. Rev. F. X. Specht and Revs. N. E. Pilger and B. M. O'Boylan $500, Rev. C. R. Rhode, M. M. Meara, D. A. Clarke, and T. J. O'Reilly $250, and an anonymous priest (whom we now can identify as Rev. William McDermott) $1,000, most paying over ten years. (Some of these pledges later were increased.) He asked the rest of the clergy to pledge what they could and let him know as soon as possible.

Most of the priests responded promptly, by the end of November. Father William McDermott noted that he admired Moeller's "grand endeavors to wipe out that awful debt that has hung over the diocese like a hideous nightmare so long."³⁸ As of December 13, two prominent priests still had not made any pledge and the Bishop was toying with the idea of whether he could fix an amount they should contribute. This turned out to be unnecessary. The report on the debt dated September 4, 1901 shows $17,585 pledged by the diocesan clergy (excluding $750 of Father McDermott's pledge).³⁹

NOTES

- A) Hetty Green's story has been told often, but is not for our Bulletin. Born in 1834 and died in 1916, she was the wealthiest woman in America, worth over $17 billion in today's dollars. She lived in the Northeast and was a Quaker but late in life was baptized in the Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Margaret Scanlon -- Value beyond Pearls

(From the Somerset Press, May 23, 1889)

Died, at her long time residence in this place of dropsy, on the morning of May 14th, at 4 o'clock, Margaret Scanlon nee Lynch, relict of the late Michael Scanlon, aged 62 years. She was born in the town of Ballylongford in 1837 and was married in the same town on the 10th of May 1850. Six months after her marriage her husband left her to come to this land of the free to make a home for himself and darling wife. In 1853 we saw his face for the first time. He was then in the employ of Fink & Dittoe, contractors like ourself on the C. & H.V.R.R., and worked in the cut at Somerset until the work was suspended in 1854. He never engaged in any of the strikes by which that firm was harrassed and had become well known to our citizens as an honest, sober, industrious man; so when the Railroad work ceased he had no difficulty in finding constant employment from our farmers and town citizens. As soon as he got his pay for his railroad work which was slow in coming he sent for his wife. She left her old house in 1854, and in her anxiety to rejoin her husband and by some strange oversight she took passage in a ship that landed her in New Orleans, instead of one that would have brought her to New York. In the summer of 1854, the loving couple were reunited never again to be separated except by the hand of death. From that time we are familiar with their lives, and in one long life we don't know of ever seeing a happier. In the early days, Love ruled the household of children and not the rod. "Honor thy father and thy mother" seemed an innate and inborn principle in the children, and they were deserving of honor. The father always kind and forbearing, never administering reproof except when his exuberance of the youth made it necessary. The mother, gentle, patient, loving, and full of tender watchful care, busy as she had to be with her household duties, never for a moment neglected the oversight of her children. We have thought for many years that the words taught to King Lemuel by his mother as found in the last chapter of Proverbs from the 10th to the last verse inclusive were peculiarly applicable to the life of Mrs. Scanlon. We have seen her almost daily for many years, and always found her the same calm, content, happy wife and mother, who knew and felt that she was doing her duty in the love of God. When affliction came with a heavy hand striking her husband with blindness from which he partially recovered and when his fatal sickness came, not a murmur or complaint was heard from either. "Let God's will be done," was the submissive acceptance of the affliction. So when the angel of death threw the dark shadow of his wings over her and she was stricken down hovering as it were for weeks between life and death, "Whatever is God's will is my will" is all the patient sufferer said. She lived a truly christian life and died a christian death and has gone to a christian's reward. She leaves three daughters and four sons to mourn their loss, with friends innumerable. Her funeral services were held in Holy Trinity Church on Thursday morning Rev. Father Flood celebrating a Solemn High Requiem Mass after which her remains were laid by the side of her husband in the cemetery.

Requiescat in Peace, but why with that prayer, when we know she rests in peace. Far better is it to write the memorial of such a life as hers than to write the eulogy of one of the highest toned women in the country. We have written at length but all that knew this good woman will understand why, and that too much has not been said.
